Appian Way helps organisations train their in-house mobile app developers, manage their mobile app projects and run data analysis projects. More and more interactions and touch points are moving to the cloud and accessed or arranged via mobile apps. Knowing how to build them, smartly interact with customers and analyse data correctly is increasingly vital to businesses.

Appian Way believes the best long term business results come from apps built by dedicated and in-house teams. Before placing developers at customers’ offices, Appian Way assesses, hires and trains them so they can hit the ground running. More importantly, a two-year post-placement follow-up service is provided, offering weekly code review and up-skilling training to the developers. Due to an increased need for data analysis, Appian Way offers the same service for data scientists and data engineers. It helps customers structure and make sense of their data.
