The Growth of Ship Leasing Activities

According to Frost & Sullivan, the total volume of international trade enjoyed a steady growth from 2013 to 2018, at CAGR of 3.2 percent and is projected to maintain a steady growth from 2019 to 2022, at CAGR of 3.8 percent. With some 80 percent of global freight volume carried by water, the stable and sustained growth of international trade volume will stimulate the demand for shipping and ship financing.

Bank lending slumped from US$450 billion in 2011 to US$300 billion in 2018 means that ship owners are looking for alternative financing and ship leasing is becoming a popular form of financing solution (Menon Economics). The market size of ship leasing by revenue grew at CAGR of 15.3 percent from 2013 to 2018 to US$ 4.9 billion. The market is expected to grow at fast pace at CAGR of 11.4 percent from 2019 to 2022, to US$7.6 billion.

Market Opportunities in Mainland China

With the major contributor to shipowning and shipbuilding activities coming from Asia (e.g. around half of world fleet was owned by Asia, with Mainland China alone accounting for 15 percent; Mainland China, Korea and Japan together accounted for over 90 percent of global shipbuilding activity in 2018), ship financing activity is expected to see faster growth in Asia. In 2018, the top five Mainland China lessors accounted for 24.5 percent of global leasing market by revenue (Frost & Sullivan). In 2019, four out of top ten ship finance companies are from Mainland China, with top three are bank-backed leasing houses (Lloyd's List).

Leveraging Hong Kong's Strengths

Hong Kong is an international maritime centre with over 150 years of maritime history. It enjoys competitive advantage in high value-added maritime services with a strong maritime cluster of over 800 shipping-related companies. Coupled with the well-established financial market, Hong Kong is set to tap the fast growing shipping market in China. It is estimated that with the new tax regime, Hong Kong could capture 12 percent of the global ship finance market in ten years' time.
